HOW IT ALL HAPPENED.

With this issue the Silver State resumes publication after a lapse of one week. The week has been burdened with many troubles for the publishers of the Silver State. We had a linotype operator who was all right when he was at himself, but who was seldom at himself. Last Monday morning he was badly not at himself and in our anger we suddenly dismissed the man from our employ, trusting to our own capabilities to run the intricate typesetting machine until another operator could be secured. But alas, the machine was more than we could handle and when his knowledge suddenly dawned upon us, it was followed by a telegram from Reno to the effect that no operator could be secured there then as they were all busy. We telegraphed to San Francisco, and after exchanging several telegrams finally located an operator. He arrived yesterday, and the familiar tick-tack of dropping matrices on the machine is again heard.—Silver State.
